INITIATE WELCOME PACKET

The Core Statement

A day is 32 hours.

This is not a claim about the sun or the clock.
It is a framework for living with sufficiency in a world built on urgency.

We do not add hours to the day.
We restore intention to time.

What It Means to Be an Initiate

As an Initiate, you are in formation.

Your role is to:

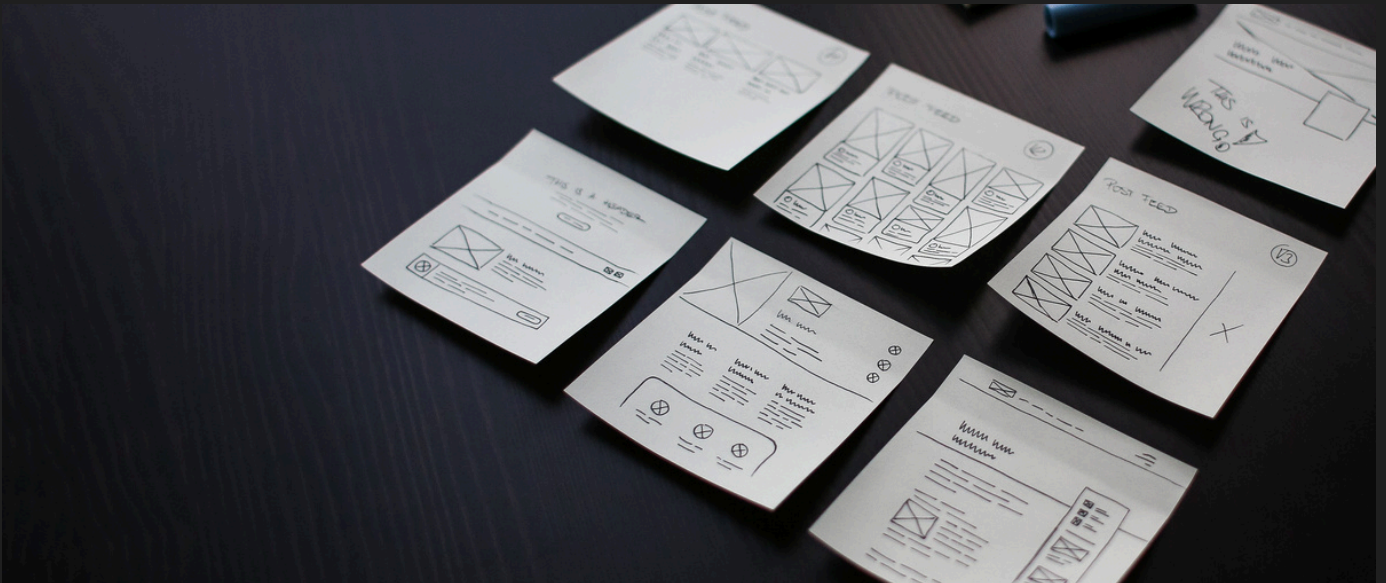

- Practice the Doctrine internally
- Observe how cycles work in real life
- Ask questions without pressure to “get it right”
- Accept gentle correction when distortion appears

You are not expected to:

- Teach the Doctrine
 - Recruit others
 - Defend the Doctrine publicly
 - Change your job, relationships, or lifestyle

The Five Domains

01

Creation — focused work,
learning, building

02

Maintenance — health, administration, stability

03

Reflection — review, journaling, meaning

04

Connection — family,
community, service

05

Rest — sleep and restorative stillness

A cycle is incomplete when one domain is repeatedly ignored.

The Standard 32-Hour Cycle (Suggested)

Domain	Purpose	Typical Range
Creation	Deep work, learning	10–12 hours
Maintenance	Health, admin	4–6 hours
Reflection	Review, planning	2–3 hours
Connection	Relationships, service	4–6 hours
Rest	Sleep + recovery	8–10 hours

This cycle may span multiple calendar days.

How Cycles Work in Real Life

Because the world runs on 24 hours, cycles are flexible.

You may:

- Split a cycle across several days
- Run smaller “mini-cycles” during busy periods
- Repair neglected domains in the next cycle

You may not:

- Skip rest repeatedly
- Use the Doctrine to justify harm or avoidance
- Turn cycles into rigid rules

Daily Practices (Simple & Sustainable)

You are encouraged to practice the following:

- Start-of-cycle intention: choose 1–3 Creation outcomes
- One protected depth block: silence devices, single task
- Maintenance anchor: movement, hydration, one admin task
- Reflection: 10–20 minutes of review
- Rest gate: a clear end to productivity

These are guides, not tests.

The Entry Vows (For Reflection)

You are not required to memorize these.
They are here to set orientation.

- I affirm that time, when lived with intention, is sufficient.
- I will not mistake urgency for importance.
- I commit to depth where depth is required.
- I will protect rest as essential, not optional.
- I accept responsibility for my attention.
- I will not impose this doctrine on others.
- I accept correction when distortion appears.

Your Rights as an Initiate

You always retain the right to:

- Leave at any time, without explanation
- Say no to questions or practices
- Rest without justification
- Ask for clarification
- Raise concerns about authority

Retaliation or pressure is not permitted

Correction & Support

Correction is:

- Private before public
- Gentle before firm
- Restorative, not punitive

Your first point of contact is usually a Keeper or Steward.

Closing Orientation

You do not need to rush.
You do not need to impress.
You do not need to perform.

Practice quietly.
Notice what changes.
Repair what is neglected.

A day is 32 hours.
Live accordingly.
